5 marketing trends for engaging nurse practitioners and physician associates

Nurse practitioners (NPs) and physician associates (PAs) are at the forefront of patient care, making them an essential audience for your marketing. This infographic reveals five trends to help you craft engaging, credible content for this influential group. Discover their digital habits, purchasing power, and more to transform your marketing into effective, tailored strategies.

Digital content is king.

NPs and PAs depend on various digital resources to keep current and connected within their profession.

use society websites to access digital content turn to online journals to stay up to date rely on free online news and commentary platforms such as WebMD or Medscape

listen to podcasts for professional updates

see webinars as a key source of ongoing information

Key takeaway: To effectively reach NPs and PAs, prioritize content and messaging through the trusted digital channels and platforms they already use for professional development.

Peer-reviewed content drives decisions.

Evidence-based, peer-reviewed content is the gold standard for influencing clinical decisions.

content most influential review articles

clinical reviews

to build credibility and trust.

Key takeaway: Ensure your materials are backed by evidence-based, peer-reviewed research

Industry-sponsored content must add value. NPs and PAs are open to industry-sponsored content, but it must be credible and relevant.

place value on industry-sponsored resource centers say clinical data citations in ads boost credibility find industry-sponsored messages provide some value depending on the topic covered

Time constraints demand concise messaging.

NPs and PAs face significant challenges managing their time and staying up to date.

busy professionals.

Key takeaway: Create concise, digestible content that highlights main points and saves time for ensures better engagement. Over the last two years, 30% 2023 the percentage of NPs and Purchasing influence is shifting.

The roles of NPs and PAs in purchasing decisions are evolving, and they now have greater influence over institutional choices. Aligning with their preferences

PAs influencing purchasing 40% 2025 decisions grew. The percentage of enduser-only roles dropped.

Key takeaway: Marketers sho not just as end users but also purchasing decisions, tailorin

at Wolters Kluwer

54%	2023
45%	2024
ould target NPs and PAs o as key influencers in ng messaging to highlight nal benefits.
		J

product value and institution

Partner with Lippincott® HCP Access

Lippincott® HCP Access ensures your brand delivers the right message, in the ideal format and environment, at the perfect time. Connect with our audience of over 600,000 NPI-verified advanced practice providers. For tailored advice on building a successful

Health, Learning, Research, & Practice 215-805-6602 | Ryan.Magee@wolterskluwer.com

Ryan Magee, Senior Account & Relationship Management Executive, Advertising Sales

Wolters Kluwer

advertising strategy, contact: